VANCOUVER.

The bill to incorporate the embryo city of Vancouver was the cause of a very animated discussion in the House yesterday afternoon. When the second reading was moved by Mr. ORR, Mr. MCTAVISH asked what right the incorporators had to interfere with vested interests and change the name from Granville to Vancouver. This was the signal for every member in the House who was opposed to the name, as well as those who are opposed to the place, to protest against the use of the word "Vancouver." The Provincial Secretary warmly defended the selection, and warned Island members to beware and not plant the seeds of discord at the birth of the new city, because they might in the future bear bitter fruit. The opportunity desired by the leader of the "third party" had arrived, and he did not fail to take advantage of it. Messrs. C. WILSON and THEO. DAVIE fairly "sat upon" the unfortunate Provincial Secretary, while the other malcontents gave him a few feeble kicks. Mr. ROSSON's offense—if he was guilty of one at all—was more in the manner and tone in which he spoke than in what he said. He assumed, probably, without any justification, that the gentlemen who reppresent Island constituencies were about to attack the Bill and refuse incorporation solely because the place had been called by the same name as Vancouver Island. This was a great mistake to make, and by this time the Provincial Secretary has no doubt bitterly repented it. It is unfortunately a fact that a jealousy does exist in the minds of some people against the new town on the inlet. It will be a great pity if that feeling should dominate any respectable section of our people, or be permitted to grow any stronger than an honest business and commercial railway for supremacy. British Columbia has too few towns, and the towns she has are too small, for those now here, to begin a policy that must be inimical to the whole Province and most of all to those engaging in the disgraceful and unpatriotic strife. THE TIMES does not believe that the members of the House will be actuated by considerations of that kind and Mr. ROSSON made a grievous mistake in attempting to bully them.

The debate demonstrated one fact. The days of the Sarvus government, as now constituted, will end forever on the dissolution of the present House. The combination can never again exist. The Provincial Secretary and Chief Commissioner can never again coalesce, and were they to attempt it, the "faithful followers" would rebel. There is already rebellion in the camp and one or two Island members have been heard to forswear forever their allegiance to the tottering cabinet. Their eyes are being opened when it is too late. Poor ROSSON! Unfortunate DUCK!

THE C. P. R. AGREEMENT.

A perusal of the correspondence between the government and the C. P. R. officials in relation to the Coal Harbor extension is highly amusing. The correspondence covers a period from December, 1884, to the latter part of last month. Time and again have the public been assured that all matters between the high contracting parties had been satisfactorily arranged and a transfer of documents taken place. On the strength of these assurances—given by the government—many people have been led to make investments in purchasing property in the neighborhood of the proposed terminus. When the government advertised its sale of English Bay lands the most positive assurances were given that everything had been signed, sealed and delivered. The sale was held on the 18th of January; on the 16th of February the Hon. WILLIAM SMITHE, Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works, through the Manager of the Bank of British Columbia, transferred to the Bank of Montreal in that city, two crown grants:

"To be delivered to Mr. Van Horne, the Manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, upon his delivering to the Bank, then to be forwarded to the Government, a resolution of the Directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, under the seal of the Company, with a memorandum accompanying the resolution, signed by the sureties Messrs. Smith, Van Horne, and Sanford Fleming."

To this letter, so far as the public are aware, there has been no reply from Mr. VAN HORNE, nor from the Bank of Montreal. So that even yet there may be a hitch, which, however, is not probable.

Another strange circumstance is to be found in reading clause 9 of the agreement between the government and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, dated 23d February, 1885. It reads "that "the grant shall also be subject to "such rights, if any, as may legally "exist in favor of third parties."

But the most amusing of all is to be found in the concluding clause of the agreement drawn up on the 23d of last November, wherein the government indemnifies the Canadian Pacific Railway Company in the following language:

"To save, defend, keep harmless, and "forever indemnified, the said Company "and their assignee against all legal "claims, and damages, and actions, and "suits in respect thereof, which shall or "may be sustained against the said Com-"pany in respect of the aforesaid land, or "any part thereof, except in the townsite "of Granville." * * * This agreement is entered into on the understanding that the said Chief Commissioner shall not in any event be held individually responsible.

Here we find the Premier disclaiming any responsibility in the matter. The validity of the document is not questioned, but is amusing to note that so slip-shod an instrument should be passed between legal gentlemen—for it is to be presumed that it was prepared by the Attorney-General ere it was accepted by the solicitors of the Railway Company. It will be observed that the agreement is entirely at variance with the instructions of the Assembly to the Government last session. It need not be a matter of surprise if the next move of the Premier will be to issue credit notes on behalf of the province and claim indemnity for so doing. The fault of the delay does not appear to be with the railway company, but with the Government and other parties in this province interested in these negotiations which have been carried on now for close upon two years.

SOCIAL PURITY.

An esteemed correspondent transmits to THE TIMES the annexed appeal on behalf of social purity, issued by a committee of Chicago ladies, one of whom—the principal in fact, is Frances E. Willard, who will be remembered by many in this city, having lectured here some months since and solicits its publication in THE TIMES. Notwithstanding that our space is much crowded at present, we comply with her request.

The appeal is dated Chicago, Feb. 15, and is addressed

To all who think that not only "Fallen Man", but "Fallen Woman" can be saved:

A practical movement has been started in Chicago, which has for its motto, "Not willing that any should perish." Its object is to go out into the highways and hedges, seeking to save the lost; to reach out pure and friendly hands which they may grasp; and to set forces in motion by which they may have hope of restoration to a good and useful life. As the gospel cure for drunkenness has been offered to men who were impure as well as intemperate, so it is proposed, in sisterly love and kindness to come with that same heavenly help to women who are intemperate as well as impure. There is no warrant in the laws of nature or of grace, for proffering a broader gospel to the one class than to the other. If there is hope for sinful men, there is just as much hope for sinful women. The lips of Christ spoke no words so full of tender compassion and divinest hope as to the "Magdalene." It seems pitiful that society, the unforgiving, while applying this name to its outcast women should forget that He "who spoke as never man spake," freely forgave the "woman who was a "sinner," on the condition that she should "go and sin no more." But how shall these women hear without a preacher, "how shall they preach except they be sent," and what will their preaching avail or get it be accompanied by steady and earnest efforts to help these women back not only to a clean life but to a new out look for respectable maintenance? Who doubts that if the opportunity were today offered to every impure woman in Chicago to earn an honest living and be restored to society with her name made reputable once more, (as a fallen man's name can be made so readily by true repentance and the works that prove his faith), three-fourths of the disreputable houses in our city would be emptied of their tenants before sun down? But as the circumstances now are, where shall they go and what can they do? The glittering spears of social ostracism hedge them in on every side, while their partners in shame share the social triumphs of the most elegant drawing-rooms in this city of wealth and fashion, and meet the smiling welcome of proud women who would not suffer their haughty gaze to rest upon the Magdalene, lest its purity be tarnished.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has entered on the experiment of trying to reach the outcast women of Chicago. Like all beginnings, this one is small and would be unnoted but for the generous help of journalists. We have organized our committee, opened pleasant rooms and secured the services of Dr. Kate C. Bushnell, a noble Christian woman and thoroughly educated physician, who has had large experience in this work and who will "lend a hand" to any and all whom she can induce to begin the splendid struggle for a better life. Associated with Dr. Bashnell is her first trophy in this work, now for 5 years a Christian, but one knows by what she has suffered, the horrors of an impure life. We shall do the best for the protection of women and girls who are strangers in the city, or have been defrauded of their honest earnings, or who have endured such outrages as the press daily recounts, and which transplant the savagery of Indians to the centers of civilization. In their defence we will invoke such laws as are already available and steadily strive to secure better ones. The success of this venture, made in the love of God and humanity, depends upon the financial aid that may be given us. As fast as our base of supplies extends, we will multiply these agencies of help, healing and defense. We have taken up this work in faith with twenty-five dollars in our hands, contributed by one of our best women in Chicago. Our expenses can not be less than sixty or seventy-five dollars per month for the work already planned. Who will help us? Let those willing to do so, send any amount from one penny upwards, to The Inter-Ocean, Chicago, or to any one of the committee, stating in all cases that it is for this cause, and may God bless this sacred endeavor begun in His name, who said to the repentant Magdalene, "Go, and sin no more."

The appeal is signed by Frances E. Willard, Matilda B. Carse, Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, Mary Allen West, Helen L. Hood, of the Chicago W. C. T. A., whose address is 161 La Salle street.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes declares that New York invented the idea that Boston streets were made by building houses along the cow paths.

A colored railroad porter says of traveling ladies: "Spen'ence teaches me dat dey is tickled mightly of you mistakes dem husbands for brudders. I does it every time, now an' hits 'em for a dollar, shuah."

WOMAN'S VOCATION

Clearly Marked Out for Her by Nature and Revelation—A Vast Field.

Higher Education—Girls Schooling—What Men Owe their Mothers.

It is strange, observes Mrs. E. J. Jarvis, that so much should be said and written upon the subject of woman's rights and vocation, when they are so clearly marked out for her by nature and revelation, and in the physical and mental, at least which govern her being, but the frenzied attempts of some women to secure for themselves those privileges, which, if they could obtain, but few would or could enjoy, make one tremble, lest by persistence they might gain the day, and with it the suffrage. Co-education, a place among the learned professions, and a reign of Bloomerism ensue, the consequences of which would be disastrous in the extreme. For the who does not pray? It is by such means that she is rendered a fitting companion to a father, brothers, husband and sons, whilst, if her tastes be literary, she may write that which shall move the world to tears or laughter, or which, having read, mankind shall be better; and although it is true that no woman has made a great invention, composed an oratorio or opera that has lived, and that only Rosa Bonheur and the artist of the "Roll Call" in painting, and Mrs. E. B. Browning and George Eliot, in poetry and prose, have risen to the level of masculine excellence, still, so many have made valuable contributions in both these departments, as to show that intellectual gifts and even genius are not uncommon to the sex. It is well that man's generosity allows to woman the fair field for which she craves, and the applause which is due to her success, but there it should end. "So far shalt thou go and no further," is the prescription of the seal which the Creator has put upon her, and if she could but see the importance of the work which is hers by inheritance she would rest, and therewith be satisfied.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT

has been made in girls' schools within the last quarter of a century, but there is still room for much more, as many things are taught but superficially, and others of vital importance not taught at all. Should there not be a common sense preparation for the commonplace duties of every day life to begin with, or in conjunction with the usual course of study? Before a girl has learnt a Latin declension or a line of French, should she not be taught to do plain sewing, the rudiments and essentials at least of cookery, which are of even greater importance to the wealthy than to those who have to do their own work, as in the latter case, experience and necessity are the teachers, but with the former the requisite knowledge has often to be imparted by those utterly incapable of doing so? How advantageous would be a systematic course of training in order to meet emergencies and accidents with presence of mind! How many lives might be saved, for instance, if those upon the spot knew how to apply a tourniquet, tie an artery, resuscitate the drowned, treat the burned or scalded or a case of apoplexy, epilepsy or syncope. The more highly educated a woman is, the more intelligent will be her nursing of the sick, practice and theory of cooking, and work of all kinds.

FEWER LIVES WOULD BE SACRIFICED

to the ignorance of the sick nurse if a good solid education were made de rigueur—not the "little learning," which "is a dangerous thing," not the smattering of Latin which just enables her to read a perscription—wrong, but that tuition which goes deeper than the surface, supplemented by medical and surgical teaching, clinical and otherwise. Surely there is a vast field for woman's work, and that, too, of the noblest description, without infringing upon that of man, and if it be true that all great men owe their greatness to their mothers, how careful should be the training of mind and body to attain so stupendous a result as to reach from the present, down to future ages of the world's history. Home is her proper sphere, and domestic affection her highest attribute. Who does not prefer the picture of Andromache upon the walls of Troy, her only distinction, that she was the wife of Hector, her only ambition to see her husband alive and victorious, to that of Boadicea, leading her barbarian hordes to battle, or of Cleopatra, renowned for learning, wit, wealth and beauty, floating down the Cydnus in her glittering galley?

IF WOMEN WANT TO DISTINGUISH THEMSELVES

there is a matter awaiting great reform and which requires a revolution in the existing state of things. There is, in what is termed "Good Society," so much that is, if not really bad, at least radically wrong, hollow and rotten at the core, that every lady (that word should be expunged) should look to herself, and see if there be not some bab is of life which need correction. In the first place let her treat the shopping business as a fine art, or sine qua non of her existence, and more as a something to be got through with as quickly as possible, and only with a view to buying that which is required; the purchases, if very small, might also be carried home by herself, especially if the distance be great. Then, with regard to "making calls," there is so much that is insincere in the faceu de parler employed, so much valuable time wasted in calling upon those who would not care if they and their visitors never met again, and vice versa; the "not at home" falling as sweetest music on the ears of those who only come to be bored, even though the shadow of the mistress of the house be outlined upon the window curtain. Will the recording angel set down the falsehood against the name of the poor maid or butler who would lose their situation if they did not tell it? I trow not. Let each lady learn to enter a room without taking stock of the furniture, etc., and meet an acquaintance without exclaim:

"Here take an inventory of all I have, (on)
To the last penny it"—was bought cheap for cash!

THE MISTRESS OF A HOUSEHOLD

should also extend her consideration to her domestic servants, remembering that they (as she) have limbs to ache and hearts to break for that matter, and although, perhaps, then treat them with something of the same courtesy which marks her intercourse with those between whom and herself does not arise the "pale spectre of the salt." Finally, let her cast aside the weakness of purpose, slavish following of fashion and supreme silliness, which too often characterize her, with some few feathers, frills and furbelows, and she will step out of these hindrances to a true nobility transformed. Let woman, in all she does, aim at the highest, even though it be only to fail, and she will have no need to ape the man. Because Ursa Major occupies a larger and more prominent space in the heavens than the gentle Pleiades, is their "sweet influence" the less?

RAILWAYS AND CANALS.

The Canadian Pacific—Its Total Mileage—Fast Ready to Montreal.

The annual report of the Minister of Railways and Canals just published, shows that the total length of the Canadian Pacific railway from Montreal to Callander is 2,893 miles, in addition to which the company has acquired or built 352 miles of branch lines. The report refers to the completion and operation of the line north of Lake Superior, and says of the section of 423 miles from Port Arthur to the Red river: This section was transferred to the company prior to full completion, and the work of ballasting and filling in valleys crossed by temporary bridges has been since executed by the company under a special agreement. An elevator, the capacity of which is 1,000,000 bushels, has been built by the company at Fort William. They have also an elevator at Port Arthur of 300,000 bushels capacity.

Red River to Savona's Ferry, 1257 miles.—The knowledge of the climatic conditions of the mountain section gained by last year's experience showed the necessity of a relocation of part of the road, and such relocation has been effected without increase of the gradients, but with an addition of three miles to the length of the road. The line was open in October for traffic up to Donald Station, at the foot of the east slope of the Selkirks, a distance of 1022 miles, and on the 7th November, 1885, the last spike was driven, thus making rail connection from Port Moody to Montreal, a distance of 2893 miles, or to Quebec, a distance of 3089 miles. Of this distance nine miles in British Columbia will ultimately be replaced by a road with easier grades, the construction of which has been postponed owing to the heavy tunnelling involved.

The payments to the company on account of the cash subsidy to December 31st, 1885, aggregated $24,544,912, leaving a balance due of $455,088, and on account of the loan authorized in 1883 there has been paid $21,650,700, leaving due $849,300. Of the $1,500,000 voted by Parliament to secure free access to Quebec for the trains and traffic of the Canadian Pacific railway by the acquisition of the North Shore railway, there was applied to the purchase of that road $525,000, and interest on the balance of $975,000 is to be kept down by the Government during the currency that may arise in the interest on the existing mortgage bonds of the road.

WARMLY WELCOMED.

The Chinese Recognize the Importance of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Already the Chinese are beginning to realize the importance of the Canadian Pacific Railway to the Celestial empire. In a recent issue concerning the subject, the Shanghai Mercury editorially says: "The recently finished road gives England an alternative route entirely through her own territory, and renders her completely independent of the Suez Canal. The importance to her of accomplishing that object is almost beyond measurement. We all know what it has cost her to keep her right of way through the Red Sea. Her Indian empire, her trade relations with China, Japan and the Australia's and her own existence as a commercial nation, has seemed to depend upon the absolute and certain control of a narrow waterway that is coveted by other and perhaps stronger military nations. A blockade of the Suez Canal during only a three months' war would cause widespread commercial disaster in England. To guard against such a possibility, she has always to be more or less ready for war. In view of these things the importance of an alternative route that she can, at little expense and with great certainty, protect is too obvious to need further elucidation." The Hongkong Daily Press says: "The first steamer of the new line to connect this colony with the great Canadian Pacific railway, will be warmly welcomed here, not only on account of the accession of trade which an additional line of mail steamers will necessarily bring to the port, but also on account of the advantages which the new route confers on the empire at large from a naval and military point of view." When thoroughly equipped and in full working order our great transcontinental highway is destined to be one of the most potent commercial promotives in the world, as well as one of the most remunerative roads on this continent.

GOSSIP FROM OTTAWA.

Distinguished Visitor—Chinese in Bond—Temporary Loans—Sir John Ailing.

OTTAWA, March 11.—Lady Lansdowne, Sir Lionel West, British minister at Washington, and Miss West, Sir Fred. Middleton and Lady Macdonald occupied seats in the Speaker's gallery this afternoon. The galleries were densely crowded this evening and many were unable to obtain admission.

Mr. McCarthy has introduced a bill to extend the hours of polling in Dominion elections from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.

Mr. Chapleau, in answer to a question stated this afternoon that only one newspaper was paid for circulating the memorandum of Sir Alexander Campbell in relation to the Riel case, the account being ten dollars. There was a small sum paid for printing the memorandum in supplement form for distribution in the press.

The government has granted permission to railways to carry Chinese through Canada on condition that the former guarantee the landing of the Celestials in the United States or pay the tax of $50 a head for each if not accounted for. This is practically applying the bonding system to the Chinese entering Canada.

The total amount of temporary loans on June 1 by the government to March 1 was $14,862,309, of which $13,362,309 was obtained in England and the balance in Canada. Of the loans in England £1,525,000 were borrowed at 4 per cent, £450,000 at 1 per cent above the Bank of England's rate and not to exceed 4 per cent, and the balance at the minimum bank rate. The loans in Canada all bear 4 per cent. interest.

Sir John Macdonald has been suffering from a somewhat severe cold the past three days.

CABLE DESPATCHES.

DYING.

LONDON, March 20.—Marie Heilbron, prima donna, is dying.

ENGLISH GOSSIP.

LONDON, March 19.—It is stated that Mr. Gladstone will not be prepared to present his scheme of Irish reform to Parliament before the first week of April. The cabinet will not meet again next week. Many had expected Mr. Gladstone to state his Irish policy next week because at the opening of the session he said he could not present it until he was through in the House with the government's financial business which he expected to have done by March 22d.

Mr. Gladstone said this afternoon in the House of Commons that he hoped to be able during the coming week to name a day for presenting a statement of his Irish proposals. Referring to current rumors about the nature of the scheme for Irish reform which he proposed to submit, Mr. Gladstone asked members of the House to exercise a prudent reserve in giving credence to any of them. He added that his statement would probably be followed by the introduction of a government bill to carry his plans into effect. Mr. Gladstone also asked that members exercise a wholesome scepticism in regard to rumors of dissension in the Cabinet.

Some of the lobby frequenters think this indicates that the differences between the Premier and Mr. Chamberlain has either been arranged or is in a fair way of being arranged. The Conservatives, however, in view of the vagueness of Mr. Gladstone's language, are inclined to think that the breach is beyond repair.

Lord Randolph Churchill is highly displeased at the political importance attached to his conference of yesterday with Mr. Chamberlain.

It is stated on indisputable authority that the Radical defection is increasing and that Messrs. Morley, Bright, Osborne, Morgan, Broadhurst and other well-known Liberal members of Parliament will join Mr. Chamberlain.

The weather has suddenly become oppressively warm. The thermometer today has registered 62 degrees in the shade. It has risen 34 degrees since Wednesday night. This sudden and rapid change from the long spell of wintry weather which, with heavy snowstorms, has prevailed over Great Britain for several weeks past, to almost summer heat in this latitude, took the people entirely unprepared, and has been extraordinarily oppressive and troublesome. In Paris there has been similar changes in the temperature and several persons have been attacked by sunstroke.

It is reported that while the burgomaster of Liege was dining with Abbe Liszet at an hotel in that city yesterday a mob of Socialists burst into the room and threatened to murder the occupants. They did not, however, attempt to carry out their threat. A general strike will be inaugurated at Liege to-day.

The House of Lords last evening by a vote of 76 to 62, adopted a motion in favor of opening the museums and libraries on Sundays.

In the House of Commons last evening a motion against making of wars and concluding treaties without previous consent of Parliament, was defeated by only six votes.

BULLDOSING.

VIENNA, March 19.—It is semi-officially announced that Russia is massing a large number of troops in Bessrabia. The object is supposed to be to exercise a pressure upon Prince Alexander, of Bulgaria, whom the Russians suspect of conspiring with England to permanently cement the present union between Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelia, maintaining his claim to the life title of the governorship of the latter country, Russia claiming that his term is limited to five years.

AMERICAN DISPATCHES.

BEAUTIFUL CLIMATE.

ST. PAUL, March 20.—A heavy snow storm set in this morning, which shows no signs of abatement. Street cars stopped running to-night. The storm is general throughout Minnesota, Dakota and Manitoba.

LABOR TROUBLES.

ST. LOUIS, March 20.—The men employed in the Wabash yards in East St. Louis to-day presented a list of grievances to the officers of the road, which they desire to have remedied. They also presented a demand that their wages be raised to the amounts paid in Chicago, and request that officials send them an answer before six o'clock this evening.

MCKEESPORT, Pa., March 20.—The strike at the National Tube Works is now general. Twenty-five hundred men are out.

RESTITUTION BY MRS. GRANT.

JERSEY CITY, March 19.—Some time before the failure of the firm of Grant & Ward, Mrs. Virginia Corbin, of this city, General Grant's sister, entrusted Colonel Grant with $25,000, which he invested with this firm. A day or two ago Mrs. Grant sent a certified check for the money from the publisher of her late husband's books.

CHINESE IN TRANSIT.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Congressman Morrow sent a letter to Secretary Manning to-day, in regard to the Treasury regulation which permits Chinese to land who are simply in transit through the country. Between August 15th, 1882, and July 31st, 1885, there were landed at San Francisco 11,162 Chinamen claiming to be in transit to some other country, as follows: From China 8671, from Victoria 1095, from Honolulu 164, from Panama 468, from Havana 720, from other ports 44, total 11,162. "I am aware," says Morrow, "that nearly all these arrivals at San Francisco are reported as having departed for some foreign country, but whether these Chinamen have actually left the United States will probably never be known by the government."

CHINESE BURGLARS.

Special to THE TIMES.

YALE, March 20.—Last night three Chinese burglars attacked Mr. Hunter in his store, seven miles below Hope. Shots were exchanged, and Hunter's married daughter was wounded. Mr. Wise has gone down by C. P. R.

The dies for the Canadian war medal have been completed by the British Mint and the medals will be despatched to Canada forthwith.

THE VOTERS' LIST.

All persons who desire to have their names added, or any correction made in their names as they appear in the preliminary list, must deliver their claims to the Revising Officers ONE WEEK BEFORE the date of the Revision Court. Or the claims may be sent by registered letter to the Revising Barrister. The claims must be in accordance with the form which was published in THE TIMES a few days since. It is said that some of the Revising Officers will accept these notices as evidence, while others have expressed the opinion that it will be necessary for the applicants to appear before them in person. No person desiring to have a voice in the control of the affairs of Canada, whose name is not on the list, should allow the opportunity to pass of having the omission rectified, for the act does not provide any other mode by which names can be added. The form to be complied with appeared in the Times on the 8th inst. The preliminary revising meeting, for Victoria city and district, will be held on Monday, 5th of April. The list of voters already printed are those appearing on the provincial voters' list. The act specially provides for the qualification of these in this province and Prince Edward Island. The only qualifications necessary in their case being that they have hitherto enjoyed the privileges of the franchise in their respective provinces; the paying of a poll tax and the registration of the name constituting the requisite qualification. Those hereafter desiring to be placed on the list must be British subjects, of the age of 21 years, and in receipt of an income of $300 a year. Exception is made in the case of fishermen, whose outfit must be worth $150. It is of the first importance that the first list should be as complete and perfect as it is possible to make it. Mr. EDWIN JOHNSON will be only too pleased to enlighten any that may call on him in quest of information, and that should be attended to during the incoming week.

PIG TAILS.

MR. J. E. VROOMAN, in a letter to Mr. N. SHAKESPEARE, M. P., speaking of the custom among the Chinese of wearing queues, says that the general impression among white people, that it is in accordance with some religious rite or ceremony peculiar to that people, is a most erroneous one. It has nothing whatever to do with religious connections or belief. The Chinese wear queues as a token of submission to the present Emperor, who is a foreigner, being a descendant of the Tartar monarch who conquered China some two and a half centuries ago. Before that period the Chinese wore no queues. This fact is illustrated every day in Chinese theatres, which are supposed to have nothing but historical plays. Mr. VROOMAN believes that it would have a most salutary effect upon the criminal class of Chinese to have them understand that as sure as they commit a crime they will be punished for the same, and be made to conform to the sanitary regulations prescribed by law and intended for all criminals, among which is head-shaving as soon as they enter the doors of the prison. In this connection it is not out of place to ask why the government countermanded the order given several months ago to the gaoler, to cut the hair from the heads of Chinese prisoners the same as from white men? According to Mr. VROOMAN, who has spent many years in China and is well informed about the people, it should cause a Chinaman no more pain or regret to lose his queue than it does a whiteman to don the prison garb. And yet the rule is not enforced against them on the plea that it is an offence against some sort of religious belief!

BENEFITS FROM HOME RULE.

Mr. GIFFEN, the celebrated statistician, in an article published in the Nineteenth Century, makes some remarkable statements as to what the economic effects of Irish home rule would be. Economically both England and Ireland would gain by it, he says. The population and trade of Great Britain have increased immensely since 1845. The population of Ireland, which was then one-third of the whole population of the three Kingdoms, has diminished by nearly one-half, and it is now but one-twelfth of the whole. Irish trade has dwindled away, and the income and capital of Ireland, which in 1845 were one-tenth of the whole, are now but one-fortieth. The resources of Ireland, all told, are now only one-twentieth of those of the three kingdoms, but Ireland pays nearly a tenth of the Imperial taxes. Its fair share would be about $17,500,000. It actually pays 35 millions. Yet so expensive is the work of keeping the country in subjection that the Imperial exchequer loses 15 million dollars a year. A more serious loss is that of the 26,000 or 30,000 soldiers now employed in keeping the people down, even though troops may be greatly needed elsewhere. The whole income of Ireland, Mr. GIFFEN calculates, is now 75 million dollars. Imperial and local taxes take 50 millions from it. Poverty is inevitable under such circumstances. An Irish Parliament, with the 35 millions additional income, could, as only a small military force would be required, pay its share of interest on the public debt, a fair contribution to the general military expenditure, and have a large balance to employ in local improvements. England would have a large military force set free, and Ireland would have for its own use the money now wasted in maintaining the enormous garrison. Mr. GIFFEN advocates the purchase of the lands by the government, and their transfer to the Irish government, as an offset to what Ireland would contribute under a general system of taxation, which he thinks could, under such an arrangement, be maintained. Ireland would be a large gainer financially. England would save fifteen millions a year. From a military point of view it would also gain much, and it would cease to be governed as it now is—to use Mr. GIFFEN's own words, "by a hostile faction coming from a country which contributes nothing to Imperial strength."

GERMANY'S AMBITIONS.

It appears that Great Britain is taking measures to check the ambitious designs of Germany in Southern Africa. In a speech delivered at Grahamstown some time ago Mr. UPINGTON said that a great political crisis was approaching, and since then news has been received of the annexation by England of Upingtonia. Germany, it is well known, has been laying plans for the union of the German possessions on the east and west of Africa, and the occupation of Ovampoland was a part of the scheme organized to that end. The constitution, therefore, out of it of the state of Upingtonia, under British protection, is intended to hinder Germany's intrusion. The region in question lies between 18 and 20 degrees south latitude and 15 and 20 degrees east longitude, and is, altogether, about 300 miles long by 120 broad. The distance from Walfisch bay to its nearest point is about 200 miles. In connection with this policy, it is stated that the new administrator of Bechuanaland is acting with firmness and energy in the maintenance of order. A proclamation recently issued warned persons guilty of spreading false reports or of causing seditious agitation, that they would be promptly arrested and summarily dealt with. Some of the disturbers were actually arrested, and one released on finding bail. This firmness is likely to have a good effect in preventing the recurrence of such disorder as made Sir Charles Warren's expedition necessary year before last.

THE retirement of Thomas Scott from the office of Town Treasurer is an event in the municipal history of Woodstock. Mr. Scott has held the position since the year 1851.

THE gross earnings of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for the week ending March 7, amounted to $131,000; for the same week last year, $107,000; increase $24,000.

AT a teameeting recently Mr. John White, M. P., for Hastings, stated that the late rebellion in the Northwest was suppressed and put down without costing Canada one cent. And this was at a teameeting, recollect!

One of the first acts of the new Lord Chancellor was to present Rev. Mr. Drew, Mr. Gladstone's son-in-law, with a valuable Crown rectory.—The Premier promptly ordered the appointment to be cancelled.

The Severn Tunnel seems likely to prove an expensive luxury to the Great Western Railway. The unexpected tapping of a landspring has occasioned an enormous and unforeseen outlay, and the opening will have to be postponed for at least six months.

It has been discovered in Madrid that the Act of Abdication signed by Queen Isabella in favor of her son, has disappeared from the royal archives. It is supposed to have been removed so as to prevent its being awkwardly produced in the event of the Queen Mother pursuing a certain line of action.

The gross earnings of the Canadian Pacific for the month of January, 1886, $500,000; operating expenses, $454,000; net earning, $46,000; for January, 1885, $85,000. Decrease in net for January is due to the operating of 461 miles of new line around Lake Superior.

ANTI-CHINESE.

Clauses Inserted in all Bills Receiving Franchises Passed this Session.

The following is the Chinese clauses prepared by the special committee and incorporated in the private bills now before the House:

This Act is passed upon the express understanding that no Chinese, either directly or indirectly, shall be employed in or about, or concerning any work or services authorized by this Act, or required by the company to be done or performed. In the event of any Chinese being employed by the company, the company shall be liable, upon summary conviction before any two justices of the peace or functionary having the power of two justices of the peace, upon the oath or affirmation of one or more credible witness or witnesses, to a penalty not exceeding twenty-five dollars or less than ten dollars for every Chinese employed; and in default of immediate payment of the penalty the same may be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the company. And in the event of any Chinese being employed by any of the company's contractors, or sub-contractors, contrary to the provisions of this Act then any such contractor or sub-contractor shall be liable, upon summary conviction as aforesaid, to a penalty not exceeding twenty-five dollars nor less than ten dollars for every Chinese employed; and in case of default in immediate payment of such last mentioned penalty, the same may be recovered by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender; and in default of sufficient distress, the offender may be committed to any gaol or place of confinement situate within the territorial jurisdiction of the convicting justices, and there imprisoned for any term not exceeding thirty days; and any director and officer of the company who causes or procures any Chinese to be employed contrary to the provisions of this Act, or permits or connives at such employment, shall be liable, upon summary conviction as aforesaid, to the like penalties as hereinbefore in this section provided, recoverable in manner secondly hereinbefore mentioned.

The offender shall be liable to separate and successive penalties for each and every day during which any Chinese shall be employed.

The term "Chinese" wherever used in this Act shall mean any native of the Chinese Empire or its dependencies not born of British parents, and shall include any person of the Chinese race.

Upon any prosecution under section of this Act, evidence under oath of any witness that to the best of his knowledge and belief any person alleged to have been employed contrary to the provisions of this Act, is a Chinese, shall be prima facie evidence that such person is a Chinese within the meaning of this Act and shall cast upon the defendant the burden of proving that such person is not a Chinese. The Justices may also decide upon their own view and judgment whether any person produced before them is a Chinese within the meaning of this Act.

No conviction or warrant for enforcing the same or any other process or proceeding under this Act shall be held insufficient or invalid by reason of any variance between the information and the conviction, or by reason of any other defect in form or substance, provided it can be understood from such conviction, warrant, process or proceeding, that the same was made for an offence against some provision of this Act, and provided there be jurisdiction to convict for such offence; and that it can be understood from such conviction, warrant or process that the appropriate penalty or punishment for such offence was intended to be thereby adjudged. Upon any application to quash any such conviction, or the warrant for enforcing the same, or other process or proceeding, whether in appeal or upon habeas corpus, or by way of certiorari or otherwise, the court of judge to which such appeal is made, or to which such application has been made upon habeas corpus, or by way of certiorari, or otherwise, shall dispose of such appeal or application upon the merits, notwithstanding any such variance or defects as aforesaid; and in all cases where it appears that the merits have been tried, and that the conviction, warrant, process or proceeding is sufficient and valid under this section or otherwise, such conviction, warrant, process or proceeding shall be affirmed, or shall not be quashed (as the case may be); and such court or judge may, in any case, amend the same if necessary, and any conviction, warrant, process or proceeding so affirmed or affirmed and amended, shall be enforced in the same manner as convictions affirmed on appeal, and the costs thereof shall be recoverable as if originally awarded.

Mr. Belmont's Bill for the regulation of Consular fees includes among other increases in salaries that of the Consul at Montreal from $4000 to $5000, and the Consul at Halifax from $3000 to $4000.

In the new House of Commons there are 75 members who own more than 3,000 acres of land each, with a rental value of more than $15,000 a year. Out of the above number there are two who own 100,000 acres, and three others more than 50,000 acres, and the possessions of seventeen of them exceed 10,000 acres each.

Three thousand Socialists and unemployed workingmen to-day held a public meeting here to discuss their grievances. The proceedings were conducted in an orderly manner throughout. The meeting deputed a committee to call upon the Mayor and present through him a demand upon the city for the inauguration of public works for the employment of labor.

The New York Sun holds that it was indiscreet in Mr. West, the British Minister to Washington, to say, as a dispatch from Ottawa reports him as saying, that "it is useless for the Canadian government to attempt to negotiate a new treaty with the United States with the Senate as composed at present. It is not so much their opposition to the new treaty that would lead the Senate to oppose the proposed Commission as it is their hostility to any measure that may emanate from President Cleveland." It is very much to be doubted that he did speak so.

THE LOST BABY.

[London Society.]

CHAPTER I.

Mrs. Nicholson was standing in a dubious attitude, with the study door half open, and her eyes turning from the quiet figure in the armchair by the table to another open door in the passage behind her, through which she could see a flood of sunshine, and in the sunshine a cradle.

"I don't feel quite easy," she said; "I am so afraid she should cry and no one hear her. I wish I had not let nurse go out; but all you have to do," coming into the room and speaking impressively, "all you have to do is to ring the bell violently—violently, remember—for cook. For heaven's sake, John," leaning on the table and stretching out a pretty hand to attract her husband's attention, "look up, or speak, or answer me, or you will drive me mad!"

"What is it all about, Agatha?" The calm, placid, intelligent face opposite was lifted gently, and the thin finger was slipped on to the page to mark a pause.

"It is baby, John," said Mrs. Nicholson, in a faltering voice, and with idle, angry tears rolling down her cheeks. "Here have I, for the last ten minutes, been begging and imploring of you to remember baby; not to nurse her, I wouldn't trust you, but only to ring the bell if she cries."

"Does that stop her? It seems simple enough. I think even I can do that."

But Mrs. Nicholson shook her head, still weeping.

"You may laugh at me or sneer if you like. If it were my own baby I would say nothing, I would bear it all; but Emmy's!"

With patient sigh the gentleman at the writing table pushed the book away and lost his place. He looked at her in a bewildered way.

"What is it, Agatha? a baby! O, Emmy's baby, of course."

"And not one-half, one-hundredth part, one thousandth part, as valuable in your eyes," broke in Agatha, with impetuosity, "as the smallest, the most unknown, the most undiscovered star! You need not tell me; I know it."

"Of course," frowning gently, "every one knows that a star, however small—stars are not famous according to their size, my dear—is of infinitely more value than one hair of a baby's head. I mean"—hastily—"speaking from the entirely scientific point of view; but as you were saying—you were saying, were you not"—a little doubtfully—"something about that unfortunate babe of Emmy's?"

Mrs. Nicholson had dried her eyes, and was confronting him in all the cool splendor of her pretty summer dress, and with all the calm determination of a woman who has made up her mind.

"Yes, I was," she said; "only, once for all, John, if you call it a babe I will leave your house at once and never, never come back; and if you call it unfortunate I shall take that hateful manuscript with me and burn it at the kitchen fire. If it were yours"—with impassioned irony—"it might indeed be described as unfortunate; but Charles is the best of fathers, and he has always been the best of husbands."

"Yes, yes, of course, my dear. I said nothing against Charles; I did not know we were talking about him. We can finish him up to-night," cheerfully. "If that is all you have better go out now, while it is fine," turning his eyes to the dazzling sunlight for an instant and then back to his blotted page. "You can tell me about Charles, you know, when you come in. The best of husbands! I don't know much about them, I fear, but I know a little about the best of wives."

He rose and laid his hand on the long, slender, soft gray glove that was leaning with determination on his neat manuscript. The gray glove closed round his hand gently and clung to him almost as if it were loth to leave the thin worn fingers; but he patted it gently and laid it aside. Mrs. Nicholson gave a faint sigh, but when she spoke again she spoke with less decision and more pleading.

"It is not Charles, indeed, it is not; it is the baby. Nurse has gone out, and I have put her cradle in the morning room by the window. John," suddenly "are you listening? What did I say last?"

"The morning room, Agatha."

"Well," with a sigh of relief, "I see you are taking it in and forgetting those horrible stars; and how you can compare a star to a baby," parenthetically, "is past me."

"I am sure I never did," he said gently.

"Well, don't interrupt me, John, or I shall never get out. What was I saying? Oh, baby is in the morning room, and if she cries—make one sound—you are to ring your bell—this bell, John—for cook; do you understand?"

"Yes, I believe so. I am to ring the bell—this bell—for cook."

"Oh, I hope you will," after a pause. "Fancy," her eyes filling with tears again, "if she cried, and no one heard her! O John, you will not deceive me? You will try—and—ring!"

"My dear," speaking with some dignity, "surely I am not utterly destitute of common humanity or common sense. I have interesting work here," pointing to the manuscript and the books of reference heaped around him; "but I suppose, after all, I am human."

"O, I hope so, I think so," cried Agatha, clasping her hands; "only you might not hear her, that was all I meant."

"Then I think," he said, with a gentle sarcastic smile, "that you may dismiss your fears; they are quite groundless."

"Very well," said Agatha, moving in a hesitating way to the door. "I am satisfied, I am trying to be satisfied; don't forget."

"No," cheerfully, "I will take a leaf from Charles's book, the best of husbands."

"Oh"—the gray glove had closed on the handle of the door, but released it again—"the Raynters are coming to-night, so you must not go out star gazing."

"Good-bye." The bright face, that had almost disappeared round the door, came back again, and leaned against the worn velveteen of the astronomer's coat; for a minute the lips were pressed to it, then lifted. "Kiss me, John; you are a dear old fellow after all, and I am a fiend."

The sunshine seemed to leave the room with the sweet bright presence and hover over the pretty cradle, among the sounds and scents of the midsummer day. In the library there was only one shaft of light that came through the high windows and across the old velveteen coat, and the tidy manuscripts, and the open books, and left the handsome, clever, refined face in shadow.

CHAPTER II.

It might have been two hours afterward—painful after events created a confusion in Mr. Nicholson's mind, and the two hours might have been two days—when he became aware of a laugh in the passage by the door. His hand had grown tired with writing, but the pen traveled steadily on; his eyes had grown a little tired; and it was a relief to raise them for a minute to the locked door, behind which he heard the laugh. He rose, with a half smile on his grave face, and paused, struck by a sudden presentiment. Something came back to him as he stood in the dull light of the dull room; was it a dream or a memory, or was it—the baby? He pushed his papers further away and walked over to the door and unlocked it, throwing it wide open. There was nothing in the passage but the yellow sunlight now upon the walls and on the old prints and Mrs. Nicholson standing in her pretty gray dress, with her slim hands stretched out and the laugh that had disturbed him still upon her lips.

In the room beyond there was more sunlight and the cradle.

"John," cried Mrs. Nicholson, laughing again as if she could not help it, "what have you done with her? Give her to me. You are earning your title to the best of husbands!"

He looked up in quick perplexity. "What is it, Agatha? What do you want? I have nothing to give you."

"Oh don't, John!" she cried impatiently; "don't tease! I want baby."

"Well"—the same perplexed look creeping over his face, and softening its sternness—"take her," stretching out his hand to the cradle in the sunlight.

Agatha's eyes were turned on him for a minute with a look of contempt before which he positively quailed. Then she swept over to the cradle, and tossed out the little pillow, and the sheets with their lace edges, and the pale-blue satin coverlet on to the floor in a soft heap, and stood looking down upon the empty cradle as if she would conjure up the pink face and the flaxen head into their accustomed place.

Mr. Nicholson had followed her on tiptoe and was stirring the softly shining heap on the floor with his patent leather shoes, as if he half imagined that she had tossed the baby out among them.

"Well?" said Agatha sharply.

"Well?" he echoed feebly.

"Do you mean to say," she said, putting aside her angry vehemence and speaking tearfully, with her gray eyes turned up to his—"Oh, John, do you mean to say that you have lost her?"

"I never touched her," he cried hastily. "I never—" heard her, he would have added, but again that faint memory—that dream—stirred him. "Upon my honor, Agatha," he said abruptly, leaning down into the cradle, and poking at the mattress with his thin fingers, "upon my honor I can't remember."

"You can't remember!" said Agatha, with slow scorn. "Why John, she roared! Cook heard her in the kitchen. She came rushing up, and found the cradle empty and baby gone. She thought you had taken her into the study; she told me so; but oh, John, it was somebody else, and they have stolen her."

"My dear," he said, shaking himself together, and speaking more lightly, "who would steal her?—a baby roaring, as you say!" He shuddered. "Why, surely no one in his senses would do such a thing!"

"Emmy's baby!" cried Agatha tearfully, "and that is how you speak of her! O John, dear John, think again; didn't you hear her? Perhaps you have forgotten—perhaps you have put her somewhere, and she has gone to sleep. Sit down, John, and think—perhaps you have put her somewhere and forgotten."

Mr. Nicholson sat down on the window sill and covered his face with his hands. He tried to think, but whenever he concentrated his mind on the baby he was dimly conscious of that fading fancy that he could not grasp—that dream of a cry. It had disturbed him, he remembered, that loud, painful, jarring cry, but it had died away; surely it had died into peace without his interference? "Agatha," he said, lifting up his face, sharpened with the effect of thought, "I do remember something—somebody crying; it must have been the babe."

"Yes," said Agatha eagerly, "go on! You heard her! That is right. Cook says you must have heard her, she roared so. Well, and then? You—"

"I—I can't remember, Agatha. I may have gone on writing; that seems the most likely, I think; but I may have gone to the door. No," shaking his head, "I can't get beyond the cry. I do remember that now distinctly."

"Perhaps," said Agatha, hopefully, through her tears, "you have put her somewhere in the library. What have you been doing or using this afternoon?"

Mr. Nicholson followed humbly as she swept in before him, and flung open the great curtains, so that the light rushed in on to his table, strewed with plans and manuscript. Even then he spread out his hands, almost unconsciously, to defend his precious papers from her light scornful touch; but she stood in the center of the room, looking into every corner with her quick, soft eyes.

"What have you used, John—this chair? You have not been to the cupboard? No" peeping into a dark recess, musty with papers. "What else?"

"Nothing else, Agatha, here, except," with a quick smile, "the waste-paper basket, and that is empty. You can see for yourself."

"Ah," said Agatha, "here is cook," as a heavy breathing became audible in the passage. "Cook," her voice trembling at sight of the sympathetic face, "your master has not seen the baby—at least, he thinks not. He was very busy, but he heard her cry, and he may have taken her up and forgotten. We are looking for her."

"Which you won't never find her, then," said cook, in a broken voice. "In my last place but one, where I was general cleaner in Mrs. 'All's family, there was a child disappeared, as it might be this, and is was never found—gypsies or not, it was never come across again."

"Oh don't, cook!" cried Agatha, plaintively. "And Emmy coming this evening! Your master thinks he may have put her somewhere and forgotten. He remembers hearing her."

"Which he might," said cook, "not being deaf. Which I don't mean no disrespect, sir, but she was roaring awful and I says to Maud, says I, 'Master'll never no vow to quiet that child, so I'll run up an' bring her down a bit,' and I stops to change my apron, and I ups, as it might be here, and the cradle, as it might be there, and no sound, and the cradle as empty as it is this minute."

Cook turned dramatically, and pointed one stout arm to the little cradle in the sunlight. Mrs. Nicholson's tearful eyes followed the hand, and her husband stood uneasily in the center of the group, with an anxious frown upon his face.

"Which," added cook scornfully, "I think a baby—and such a one, bless her! —is of more vally than all this rubbish." She waved her hand over the table, on which lay the neat manuscript and the rows of mended pens; and Mr. Nicholson moved instinctively a step backward, as if she had an evil eye and his writings would shrivel up at her scornful gesture.

"Cook," said Mrs. Nicholson, with dignity, marred a little by the quiver in her voice, "you don't understand. Your master is very clever, and his writings are of great value. Of course," with a pleading look upward, "baby is our first thought just now. There are no wild beasts here, so she cannot be eaten. But she has gone, and before Emmy comes this evening she must be found."

"Of course she must," said her husband, plucking up courage from her exceeding great cares. "We will begin systematically, and go through every room in the house."

So the search began, that ended an hour later, in the great hall, with three perplexed faces meeting each other at the foot of the stairs, in silence that Mrs. Nicholson broke.

"It's no use, John; I cannot bear it any longer. She is lost!"

She flung out her empty hands with a despairing gesture, but her husband caught and held them.

"Don't give up, Agatha; it will all come right. If I search the world through, I will find her."

"Or the body," said cook.

Mrs. Nicholson shuddered.

The minute's silence was broken by a sound of merry laughter and the trampling of feet. For a minute Agatha raised her head, listening intently, and then she drooped it with a sigh.

"It is only the rectory boys, John," she said; "they have been in the hay field all day, and I asked them to tea. I can't speak to them. I am too anxious."

She would have moved away, but the noise and laughter were all in the hall already, and the boys were stumbling up toward her in the darkness, over the rugs and skins. Something white was being shoved from one to the other, and was pushed into Agatha's arms at last, and held there by a pair of rough, sunburned hands.

"What is it? Oh, Jack, what is it?" she cried, bending down and kissing, to their owner's great surprise, the boy's rough hands.

"Don't, I say," said Jack, drawing them away with a curious, shamefaced look. "It's only the baby, Mrs. Nicholson. She was crying in the cradle, so I just got into the room and bagged her. She's been playing in the hay; she nearly got jabbed with a rake, but Jim got it instead. She's a jolly little thing. Did you miss her?"

"Yes, I thought she was lost," said Agatha gently.

"Lost!" with a roar of laughter. "Well that is good! May we wash our hands for tea? I'm not so dirty, I've been holding her; but Jim's simply mud all over. Here, have you got her? it's so dark I can't see."

The turbulent tide swept away into the dim distance of stars and passages, leaving a little group in the twilight of the hall; a tall, dark figure, against which a golden head was leaning, and two arms with a white bundle folded in them.

"Kiss her, John," came a soft voice out of the darkness. "I know you would rather not, she's only a baby, not a star; but just as a punishment because you were so stupid."

The tall figure stooped and laid a dark mustache against the little bundle.

"She's very soft," said another voice; "I don't think I ever knew so much about a baby before."

There was after a moment's silence, a movement on the man's part, as though he was drawing himself up to his full height, with a view to reassuming his dignity. He cleared his throat.

"After all, Agatha," he said grumly, "I did not lose the baby."

"I never said you did," said Agatha; "I only asked you, and you couldn't remember."

"Another time," with an evident effort, "I suppose I shall be condemned unheard."

"Another time!" scornfully. "You may set your mind at rest. Neither I nor Emmy is in the least likely to trust you again, at least not with anything of value."

"Then how about the baby?" with a laugh.

"That," said Agatha firmly, "includes the baby."

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

While the TIMES is always prepared to give publicity to the views of correspondents on any question of interest to the public, provided facts are given, couched in unobjectionable language we wish it to be understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the views expressed by the writers thereof.

Nor can we give room to duplicates of letters that have appeared in our contemporaries either in this city or elsewhere in the province. Correspondents, therefore, will save time and trouble in preparing such for THE TIMES, as they will be rejected.

Our space is valuable, and brevity, as far as possible, should be observed in writing on any topic, and on ONE SIDE of the sheet only.

—The Gen. E. Starr brought the following passengers: J Sullivan, A Rhodes and daughter, Wm Pierce, B Day, J Holsan, R H Dodd, M Donohue, A Brenan, N Corcoran, P Cosgrove, Mrs Cosgrove, F E Sauder, W Winston, A Warfield, Clarke, Johnson, Bibero, Woods, Miller.

—"Politics makes strange bedfellows" truly. Only a few months ago, the Mayor and our esteemed friend of the Colonist were at dagger's drawn; now they are "hail fellows well met" and go around in tours of street inspection arm in arm. The Lion and the lamb have lain down together and a little child (at present) is leading them. Let both very long continue!

THE ARCADE.

Mr. David Spencer's New Dry Goods Palace—Tenders Asked For.

A few days since reference was made in these columns to the proposed new store Mr. David Spencer was about to erect on Government street on the site of the premises formerly occupied by Mr. John Finlayson, grocer, and extending to Broad street. The plans are now on view at the offices of Mr. Fisher, architect, in DeCosmos block. The building for Mr. Spencer will be known as the Arcade, will be two stories high, and have a frontage of 33 feet by a depth of 240 feet. The Government street elevation presents a very neat appearance, and when completed will be quite attractive. The design is neat and artistic, but devoid of any extra unnecessary elaborations. There will be five sheets of plate glass each 7x10 on the frontages; over which will be another 6 feet of glass, much of which will be figured and colored, imparting a fine effect to the inside appearance of the store. The height of the ceiling on the ground floor is to be 12 feet. The second story will be lighted by six windows, each 36x48. The second story on Government street is to be devoted to offices. The Y. M. C. A. have leased a room fronting on Broad street 30x35, which will be divided into a lecture, reception and other rooms. The second story has a ceiling of 14 feet. On the ground floor, in the centre of the building, will be located the millinery room. It will not, however, be on the principal floor, but in a side room which will also be a very commodious room, lighted from the roof. The entrance to the second story from Government street will be by a stairway on the left side of the store, and on Broad street from the right. Skylights will be utilized to thoroughly light the interior of the establishment. A flag staff 35 feet high will surmount the Government street elevation, giving the whole a finished appearance. The internal fittings will be of the most modern design. Upon the whole the "Arcade" will be one of the most elaborate and complete mercantile establishments in the Northwest, and a credit to its enterprising proprietor as well as an ornament to this city.

TWENTY-FOUR O'CLOCK.

The New System Adopted by the C. P. R. Company on the 1st March.

Superintendent Pound, of the Winnipeg and Port Arthur division of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, on the 1st inst., put the twenty-four o'clock plan of time-table in operation on his division for the purpose of a test. That division was selected because it is 430 miles long, and, as he said, a time-table extending over such a lengthy line would manifestly be materially simplified by avoiding all reference to the distinguishing terms of a. m., p. m. noon and night. Since March 1st the periods of time are expressed by stating the time of arrival at Port Arthur at thirteen o'clock and the hour of departure from Winnipeg nineteen o'clock. The line from Winnipeg to Port Arthur, however, forms only a small portion of the Western Division. Its entire length is 1459 miles. The Superintendent said that it is a fact that the large majority of railway managers in the United States and Canada who have given the subject investigation are in favor of the plan of simplifying railway time-tables by avoidance of the division of the day into two parts of twelve hours each, and by computing time so that 12 p. m. shall be 24 o'clock. He believed it will be adopted within the next ten years on all the long lines. The experimental test of the system is about to be made in a locality where any advantages it may possess would be specially useful on such a lengthy division and the disadvantage would be of small amount.

A BENEFACTOR.

Different Opinions as to What Constitute a Genuine Benefactor.

The Marquis of Lorne has contributed a second paper to Good Words, which appears in the March issue of that serial. Illustrations are likewise given from sketches prepared by H.R.H. the Princess Louise. The Marquis on this occasion is not up to his usual standard of excellence. In the current paper he deals with the emigration boom of 1881, the marvellous growth of Winnipeg and Brandon, as well as many other cities and towns in the Northwest. Amongst other amusing incidents appears the following which may be of peculiar interest to many in this province as narrated by the Marquis, and told to him by an early settler. "Yesterday," says the settler in question, "an old man over seventy years of age came to me. Where had he come from? He had been born and bred in Golspie. I gave him some of the whiskey of the country and told him that when next he came I might be able to give him a glass of Clyneleish whiskey from Brora. I was amused at his remark of thanks, for the curse of this region may be put down as whiskey drinking in excess. Such scruples had evidently not troubled my friend, for when I announced my expectation of the arrival of mountain dew from Sutherland, he said: 'Weel now, sir, ye'll just be the making of this countree!'"

CHINESE IN AUSTRALIA.

H. J. Lennox, of Melbourne, Australia, who is sojourning in San Francisco, states that the Australian colonies are experiencing troubles with Chinese immigration similar to those that have excited the public on the Pacific coast during the past year. In Victoria a poll tax of $10 a head is rigidly enforced, and the immigration act limits the entry of non naturalized Chinamen to one passenger for every 100 tons of the vessel in which they may arrive. During the month of January the ship Afghan arrived at Melbourne from Hongkong. She had 178 Chinese passengers on board. Of these 127 were naturalized British subjects but 52 attempted to land upon false papers. As the Afghan was only a 1400 ton ship her limit of passengers was fourteen. Capt. Ray was at once cited to appear in the city bench, and as the evidence was clear against him he was promptly fined $500. Evidence brought out during the trial showed that in Hongkong brokers do a good business in Victoria naturalization papers. In several instances boys of 14 who were passengers upon the Afghan had papers stating that the owner's age was 40 years. Upon being pressed as to how they secured these papers, the boys admitted that they had paid 140 taels for them in China; for that sum brokers had guaranteed to land them in Melbourne. One hundred and forty taels is about equal to £35 English currency.

THE DUAL VOTE.

Mr. Grant has given notice in the House that he will move the insertion of the following clause in the Municipalities Act Amendment Bill now before the House: "The Mayor or the presiding officer, or chairman of any meeting of the Council of the City of Victoria may vote with the other members on all questions, and any question on which there is an equality of votes shall be declared to be negatived."

THE WIRES.

All the telegraph wires east of Ogden are reported down to-day. After heavy snow about one hundred words of our dispatches gave out.

VANCOUVER.

A Pen Picture of the Terminus City by an Outsider.

The Vancouver fever has struck our neighbors across the border. Already a considerable number from Seattle and Tacoma have hied them hither and made Vancouver their future Mecca. Writing on the subject of the terminal city, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer says:

Vancouver, the proposed terminus of the Canadian Pacific railway, is beautifully situated on a peninsula from four to five miles long by two or three miles in width. Snow-capped mountains, running east and west, face it on the north. False creek is at present the southern boundary, with a possibility of it overleaping this barrier and fixing its limits in the forest on the hills to the south. Over a thousand acres of land have been cleared and divided into town lots. At present these lots are not selling as rapidly as one would suppose, for the reason that capitalists expect to buy lots cheaper from the railroad company. This company has five thousand acres of land for its proposed townsite. Two hundred men are cutting the timber off this tract. Until this land is cleared there will be little activity in the sale of lots. This will be no sooner than the first of May. However hopeful the people of British Columbia may be that the Canadian Pacific will be ready to carry freight and passengers by the 1st of July, they will probably have to wait until a much later date. Not much capital is going into Vancouver under such a state of things. The woodsman, the painter, the carpenter, the hotels and restaurants are reaping a golden harvest, but other branches of business are not doing much. The population at present is principally Canadians. They are looking to the time when Vancouver will be the London of America, and are depending on the celebrated American enterprise from the States to come over and help them. Men of the Pacific Coast are too well acquainted with booms to invest their all in a proposed railway terminus. They have so often been deceived by greedy railroad corporations that they throw to the winds all mandates issued by their orders. Undoubtedly Vancouver, on Coal Harbor, is the terminus. Coal Harbor is well protected from the sea, and will make an invaluable shipping place. It could not be on English Bay at the present period, for it would take millions of dollars to shield it from the open sea. In the meantime capitalists wait for the actual entrance of the Canadian Pacific road in Vancouver.

A DISAPPOINTMENT.

It is reported in Montreal that the fine new locomotive built at the Grand Trunk shops in that city for the Colonial Exhibition is not going. It seems that three days ago the locomotive was all ready to go and the government were advised to that effect. They, however, pleaded poverty, and refused to grant the $2000 which it will cost to send the engine across and bring it back, so it is not to go. When the engine was commenced it was with the express understanding that it was to be completed, and an estimate was then to be sent in of the cost of shipping it, which would be all right in any case.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

THE TERMINAL CITY.

To the Editor of The Times:

SIR,—The foundation of a new city has been laid here, and every indication of a prosperous future bears the semblance of fact. Enterprise so far has been limited to a variety of purposes, according to the limited means of promoters. The place has every appearance of a mining camp, previous to a big rush, and simply seems to be preparing for something in expectancy. The smile of hope is on every face; that is to say, every face having a settled object in view. Hotels are crowded, and accommodation so far overtaxes the genial desires of hotel proprietors. Speculation, as yet, is limited to the 85-acre lot adjoining the old town of Granville, and will be until the C. P. R. Co. throw their land on the market. By that time, however, the old town of Granville and the tract mentioned, will be almost covered with buildings, the character of which will be varied, according to the business objects of the owners. Railway work will be in full swing about the first of April, and the C.P.R. townsite will be ready for occupancy about May or June, as in the absence of rates, building will be carried on under considerable risk. The incorporation of the new city is an immediate necessity, as the Council will have an immense work before them in the assessment of property, clearing of streets and a multitude of other improvements too numerous to mention. In fact, the new Council will have to undertake the work of years in the way of preparation, and actual work. With the extensive hotel accommodation already constructed and in course of construction it is wholly inadequate to the demand, and the various lines of trade, although fairly represented are only a modicum of growing requirements. Let no one mistake me; I am not writing as an enthusiast. A deal of money will be made, and a deal of money lost, but the spirit which prompts men to undertake risk will compensate them to some extent for lost opportunities. The class of men daily arriving at the terminus are of the material which has largely built up this western portion of the continent. Sharp, shrewd and speculative, no attempt is too daring, if it looks feasible. Such spirite must win, and any city taken in hand by such a class of people must be a success. There is one thing, however, which seems to have been ill advised, and that is the selection of its present name. It may have been that when the question of terminus was an uncertainty some of its promoters adopted a name which was well known as an advertising medium in their favor. But now conditions are changed, and the practical value of the city so well known, that if it were called Hogville it would be in the same demand. Therefore, there seems to be no necessity for adopting a name likely to lead to many conflictions. It matters but little what the name really is, so that it is easy of pronunciation, and if possible the only one of the kind on the Pacific Coast. This seems to me to be a matter which should be decided at a public meeting by a majority of the citizens of that place, and the result of such deliberative decision forwarded to the directors members with a request that they see the necessary amendment made before the charter is granted. R.

Vancouver, March 19, 1886.

THE "COLONIST'S" BOULDERS.

To The Editor of The Times:

Saint David, as usual, garbles about the boulders and does not tell the truth. It is a well-known fact that truth and David are not often on very familiar terms. The Mayor did order the rocks to be removed, but the work was stopped by orders of the majority of the Street Committee. He went along with the Chairman of the Committee and the Street Overseer and the most unsightly rocks on the street corners and along the streets were pointed out and ordered to be removed, with the intention of replacing the same with stone posts; thus doing exactly what was the wish of five couples. Gentlemen will not be St. David and his three supporters was all.

One Who Knows.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Fourth Session—Fourth Parliament

THIRTY-THIRD DAY.

FRIDAY, March 19.

VANCOUVER.

The debate on Mr. Orr's motion for the second reading of the bill incorporating the terminal city of Vancouver was continued by the following members:

Hon. Mr. Smithe thought it would be possible for the House in committee to strike out the name Vancouver, but if that were done the bill would be killed. There was no petition before the House for the incorporation of the city of Granville, but there is one for the incorporation of Vancouver. The bill should be discussed on its merits; if it was a bad one, let it be voted down and the people can then incorporate under the general act; but it was unworthy of this House to refuse the prayer of the petitioners simply because they wanted to call the place Vancouver.

Mr. Semlin said the question had come up in the Private Bills Committee, but it was thought that the name might well be left to the House. He would not, however, vote against the bill, because the name Vancouver had been given to the place. It was well known that that name never was thought of until Mr. Van Horne arrived here about two years ago. As a question of right, he thought the House would be justified in naming the place. Straws show how the wind blow, and from beginning to end the Government have given way to Mr. Van Horne. The city, in his opinion, should be called Van Horne.

Mr. Wilson said he had often been converted by the eloquence of the Provincial Secretary, but on this occasion he had been converted in a opposite direction. He did not propose to sit here and be threatened by the Provincial Secretary, the leader of the Government, or any person else. [Hear, hear.] The Municipality Act did not give the Government power to act in the way indicated by the Provincial Secretary. As far as the name goes he was perfectly indifferent, but it seemed to him that it would be well to test the threat of the Provincial Secretary and change the name to Granville. The bill, he thought, was premature, like many others which had been introduced this session. Year after year he had followed that honorable gentleman, but for one he did not propose to sit here and listen quietly to the covert threats that had been used by the Provincial Secretary.

Mr. Drake thought the actions good one, although it would be better were all corporations of this kind under a general act. The question of the name was a purely sentimental one, and as far as he was concerned it was a matter of utter indifference.

Mr. Cunningham approved of the bill, and could see no reason for refusing to pass it.

Mr. Dingwall moved the six months hoist, but the motion was ruled out of order.

Mr. McLeese regretted the intemperate remarks of the Provincial Secretary. A few days ago that gentleman had deprecated sectional feeling, but he had just made one of the most intensely sectional speeches he had ever heard. It was like flunting a red flag before a bull. The mainland members were above sectional feelings and wished it might pass away. While the House was in its present temper he thought it unwise to take a vote, as it was in the interests of the petitioners that the question should be considered calmly and dispassionately. He would for that reason move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. Dunsmuir said he had objected to the name Vancouver from the first, but the question ought to be considered in a temperate way. The name will lead to confusion at the first, as my cablegrams come to "Dunsmuir, Vancouver," and other merchants receive dispatches with same address.

Mr. T. Davie said one of the city papers had said that the leader of the opposition had cooked a pretty kettle of fish for his party; but it now appeared that the Provincial Secretary had cooked a pretty kettle of fish for his followers. That gentleman had received support from a quarter he could least expect it—from the honorable member for Cariboo, (Mr. McLeese)—who had moved the adjournment of the debate. Had the vote been taken to-day, the second reading would undoubtedly have been defeated. The island members had dealt in a perfectly fair manner with the bills which had come before the House, and had shown no sectional feeling. The Provincial Secretary had addressed the House in a narrow-minded way, but until the present session of the House, that honorable gentleman would not have attempted to berate his supporters in that manner. With a vote of ten members against the government the Honorable Provincial Secretary would not have undertaken to lecture his friends, but now that the opposition had dwindled down to six, he thought he could do so with impunity. It showed, however, the necessity for a good, strong opposition, and independent members should see in the future that they did not extend too warm a support to the government, as they seemed disposed to presume upon it.

Mr. Beaven said he had had no intention of voting against the bill, but like other honorable gentlemen he very much disliked to be bullied. He did not wish to do an injustice to the honorable member's (Mr. Robson's) constituents, because that gentleman had made a mistake in the manner in which he had addressed the House. For that reason he considered the adjournment of the debate a wise move.

The debate was then adjourned.

The Imprisonment Exemption Act and Timber Act Amendment bills were reported complete, and the House adjourned at 5:45.

EVENING SESSION.

Mr. Drake's Leases and Sales of Settlers' Estates Act Amendment Bill was reported from committee of the whole, complete without amendments.

Mr. Drake's Vancouver Tramway Company's Inspection Bill was partially considered in committee.

The Mineral Act (1884) Amendment Bill (Mr. Cowan) was further considered in committee, and reported to the House complete, without any anti-Chinese clauses.

The Legal Professions Amendment Bill (Hon. Mr. Davie) was read a second time, and referred to committee of the whole. Committee reported progress and asked leave to sit again.

House adjourned at 11:15 till 2 p. m. on Monday.

FOR EUROPE.

A very large number of Victorians have already signified their intention of visiting Great Britain and other European countries during the coming summer. The holding of the Colonial Exhibition in London will be an additional attraction to many who long to visit the scenes of their childhood, and before the summer is well advanced many others will resolve to make the trip. On the 29th inst. Mr. and Mrs. Metcalfe, Mrs. Meldrum, Mrs. Shaw and two children, Jas. McCandlish, F. Carne, Sen., Thos. Perry, A. Aaronson, Joe Levy, I. Braverman, Thos. Wall, of Nanaimo, and others will leave here via the Northern Pacific, and intend across the Atlantic. They will all be absent from three to six months.

POLICE COURT.

Wong Ah Sean and Wong Ah Tschun, charged with assaulting Wo Ah Sue, were discharged.

Joseph D. Fitthausen, charged with using threatening language to his wife, was remanded until Monday and allowed out on his own recognizance of $50.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. Geo. D. Lawson, lately editor of the Tacoma News who had spent a few days in Victoria and Vancouver during the past week, has gone to Portland.

Mr. W. J. Tippens, the Fort street confectioner, will leave for the old country on Monday. Mr. Tippins has been absent from the land of his birth for over thirty years.

SALMON.

The Geo. E. Starr steamed up to Spratt's wharf this afternoon to take on board a consignment of salmon destined for Europe.

ANOTHER CUT IN FREIGHTS.

There has been another cut in eastbound freights from Portland, the rate now being 75 cents to Chicago, regardless of classification, and to St. Paul or the Missouri river 70 cents. The very low rates to New York announced several days ago have been withdrawn. Just now very little freight is offering for the east, and the chances are that rates will be restored before the wool and salmon ready for shipment.

—The James Bay machine is not running smoothly at present. The omens are that a considerable quantity of the lubricating fluid will have to be applied to remove the friction occasioned by yesterday's episode.
